

Stand Up Speak Out Film +24 hr Play Festival 2016

About Stand Up, Speak Out:

Stand Up, Speak Out is a program put on by students to present how they believe race, religion, and sexuality are both depicted and experienced in the modern world. Communication and Media Arts students have spent the past two weeks making fictional works or documentaries focused on these issues while students in the Dance and Theater Departments have spent the past twenty-four hours putting together performances inspired by the film pieces. Student photographers from the Fine Arts department are showcasing participants through a series of portraits and behind the scenes photography that will exhibit in March.

All students involved have worked tirelessly to create these works, putting very raw and real experiences of discrimination and identity into them. The artists involved with this project have taken their stories and turned them into art through self analysis and social introspection.
